

Fly Close to the Sun

Can a logical, rational lawyer trust her instincts and seize a unique moment of opportunity? Lawyer Kieran Bridges carefully planned life has unraveled. Distraught, she travels to Cretethe island she and her deceased father had always been drawn to in search of the key to her future. She finds far more than she bargained for: a country that awakens her senses and emotions, and a man who challenges her as she's never been challenged before. She feels an inexplicable connection to Dr. Stefanos Dimitrakis, a fugitive accused of murdering his uncle. When Stefanos insists he's innocent, Kieran's instincts tell her to believe him but in the past her judgment has failed her. How can she now believe in a bond that defies reason?
